VEGREVILLE, Sept. 5.—The Exhibition grounds presented an animated appearance today, it being the occasion of the holding of the annual school fair, in which 2500 school children participated. There were over 2,500 entries, of which the exhibits of grain, calves and pigs were the outstanding features, although all other classes were well represented by exhibits of particular merit.

Among the best of the exhibits were a pair of calves from the Vegeville district, which were of a fine quality, and a pair of pigs, which were of a fine quality. The exhibits of grain were also of a fine quality, and the exhibits of calves and pigs were of a fine quality.

Robert Gordon of Rural town, who has been a student at the school for some time, was the winner of the first prize for a pair of calves. He was also the winner of the first prize for a pair of pigs. The exhibits of grain were also of a fine quality, and the exhibits of calves and pigs were of a fine quality.

Suspect Arrangement With Great Powers—Interference
May Result

MOSCOW, Sept. 5.—Soviet Russia takes a serious view of China's affairs and is not going to remain indifferent. The Soviet government is of the opinion that the Chinese are making a suspect arrangement with the great powers, and that this will result in interference with the Soviet Union.

"We have full ground to suspect that the great powers are conspiring against the Soviet Union," said a Soviet official. "The great powers are making a suspect arrangement with the Chinese, and this will result in interference with the Soviet Union."

PROSPECTS OF COAL STRIKE

Miners Stand Fast On Refusal To Accept a Cut In Wages

END OF CONFERENCE
IS EXPECTED TODAY

Officials Are Given Vote Of Confidence — "Honorable Settlement" Wanted

CALGARY, Sept. 5.—Prospects of the coal strike being settled are as remote as ever this week and there is little hope of anything else but a prolongation of the strike. The officials of the United Mine Workers of America, district 12, it was definitely learned tonight, have affirmed the stand taken by the conference committee and refused to accept any reduction of wages. The conference was unanimous in their decision and the miners have laid their plans for continuing the strike until they get an "honorable settlement."

The adjourned conference was again called to order on Friday morning at 10 o'clock and the work of a full attendance of the representatives of the miners and the coal owners was again adjourned until tomorrow morning, when they will again meet and continue the business of the conference. It is fully expected, however, that it will conclude in a close Saturday about noon and that the decision which has been arrived at will be fully confirmed by the officials of District 12.

The conference has been sitting since Wednesday, having now passed three days, during which time the whole question of the strike has been carefully considered by the representatives who were present. After full discussion and on hearing the report from the resolution committee, the conference has come to the decision which was expected. They have decided to adhere to the attitude adopted by their conference committee and it means that they have given a vote of confidence to their officials. They have endorsed the report of the conference committee and they have accepted the attitude of the report with the full assurance that they are in the right.

GERMAN ARMAMENT
CONTROL TO BEGIN

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—The international control commission, which today took control of German armaments, has agreed to avoid any obstruction of the work of the commission. The commission will be composed of representatives of the British, French, American and Japanese governments, and it will be the duty of the commission to see that the German armaments are reduced to the level of peace.

VETERAN BOWS AFTER VERY HARD MATCH

Silence Greets Victorious Player—Luck Was Good To Him, Fans Thought

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—After holding the championship for six years, the formation of the association, George L. Parker, of the Hamilton Club, the title relinquished the title in the seventh annual tournament of the Canadian Senior Golf Association to his club-mate, F. A. Parker, but it was not until both men had staged a great struggle for the honors that the veteran was forced to acknowledge defeat.

In the 26 holes, played on Wednesday and Thursday, the two players were tied for first place with scores of 142 and 143. The 142-hole play-off on Thursday afternoon, Mr. Parker made a twelve hole, 67, to square the score at 73 and the two were forced to play with the back of the net. The 142-hole play-off was a very hard match, the two players were tied for first place with scores of 142 and 143. ### TY COBB OUT TO SMASH RECORD

Has Already Passed Marks Made By Wagner And Willie Keeler

DETROIT.—The Detroit manager has accumulated more individual records than any player who has performed in the major leagues, and is still at it. During nineteen years in the American League Cobb carved his name as one of the immortals of baseball and when he was elected manager of the Tigers he was better known for his record-breaking ability than for his playing ability. In fact, the majority of players during the past few years have been able to do what he has done, and making new statistical records in every game this season. Cobb is one of the few players who has made a mark in the history of the game for several years—the consecutive years in which a player has made 300 or more hits in a season. Willie Keeler, one of the most expert basemen in the history of the game, made 300 hits in a season in 1890, but Cobb has made 300 hits in 1923, and 300 hits in 1924. Cobb's mark is now eighteen little years was expected of the Georgia Peach.

OPTIMISM PREVAILS IN H. WILLS' CAMP

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y., Sept. 5.—Word of optimism prevails throughout the training camp of Harry Wills in training near his match with Luis Angel. Wills' wonderful physique has responded to the training given him by his manager, and he is now in the best of health. Wills has been in the hospital for several weeks, but he is now in the best of health.

First Baseman Must Learn To "Go Out And Meet the Ball," Says George Sisler

By GEORGE SISLER
Greatest First Baseman of All Time.

No player can hope for success as a first baseman unless he is a sure catch. This feature of play is far more essential at first than any other place in the field. It is absolutely necessary for a first baseman to become an efficient catcher of a ball with the glove hand as well as with the bare hand. It is possible for him to stretch and take a throw while on the bag that would be impossible if he tried to make a play with both hands.

A study of the batter is another important feature that must be given much consideration. A knowledge of the field to which a batsman is most likely to hit, enables the first baseman to be in the best position to make a play.

Since perhaps 35 per cent. of the hits in a ball game are made at first base, it is an easy matter to see that the ability of the man playing that position has much to do with a club's success.

Speed enters into the play of a first baseman in many ways. It is impossible to tell just how and where a first baseman should play to be most efficient. The speed of the player enters largely into this feature of first basing. The player who has fast feet can play a much deeper first base than the athlete who is slow of foot.

In determining best possible position to ordinarily assume, the first baseman must consider not only himself but the batter as well. Naturally a first baseman can play deeper on a slow-footed batter than a speed merchant.

When to lead a runner on first is usually determined by the conditions of the game. However, it is safe to say that with second base unoccupied and a runner on first, it is always advisable to hold him close to the bag.

Every first baseman should learn the art of stretching to meet the ball. Many a diamond is won at first base by the player who goes out to meet the ball rather than catching it standing ready at first base.

A second is the difference between the lead and safe at first in a majority of plays.

Must Be Shifty on His Feet.

Perhaps the shiftest of the first base for throw is most important. To play this particular feature of first base play can only be acquired through great effort and constant practice. Some first basemen far excel others in this feature of play. Not every athlete is light on his feet, just as all of us are not good runners.

RADIALS VS. CENTRAL GARAGE

Two ball games for the Amateur Championship of Northern Alberta will be played today between the Radials and Central Garage nines at Diamond Park. The first game starts at 2:30 this afternoon and the second one is scheduled for 6 P.M.

Fans will have the chance of seeing two very likely looking youngsters on the hillcock. Roy Gledits will be called upon for mound duty on the Radials' behalf, while Leroy Goldworthy is also booked to work for the Garagemen.

The last game between these teams ended in a three-all tie and it was just as sweet a battle as anybody could wish to see. There is no reason why today's games should not be real honest-to-goodness battles.

FRED MARBERRY LIKE JOHNSON

Youthful Hurler Has Great Fast Ball With Plenty of "Hop"—Curve Just Fair

Is Pitcher Fred Marberry to supplant Walter Johnson as the champion of Washington fans? Walter Johnson, wonder that he is, cannot go on forever. There must come a time when Walter will give up his place to the younger man. Fred Marberry, a youthful hurler, has great fast ball with plenty of "hop"—curve just fair.

At present his curve ball is just fair. He is not yet a champion, but he is developing a change ball. Just now he is not a champion, but he is developing a change ball.

Maurice Barrett Company
Presents "On The Road
To Calcutta"

As a contrast to the jazz bands and gill acts that have been headlining the Palace vaudeville bills during the summer season, the program opening on Thursday afternoon will be headlined by a dramatic offering, "On The Road To Calcutta," which is presented by the well-known stage favorite, Maurice Barrett, who has written especially for Mr. Barrett's use on his Palace tour for Bradner Barker, is a dramatic episode of Mysore India, and is given a masterly presentation by these well-known actors who comprise the cast.

There are two added attractions on next week's bill, each equally good in their respective lines of endeavor. Alexander and Fiddle, who are billed as "Two of the Idle Rich," are not unknown to Edmontonians, as they are the gentlemen who emerge from their own "side door." Pullman car. They have an original brand of comedy, some new dialogue and funny parodies. The other added attraction is a trio of novelty entertainers, Howard, Wingfield, and Bruce, who feature the original Harvard trick, offering a snappy and unusual program to maintain on the first night. This is a fast-moving act, which depicts the various scenes of the world as seen from the train, and the stunts are sensational in the extreme.

Thereby, Lewis is another Edmonton favorite who is returning with a brand new act. In fact, Dorothy Reed, who is also appearing, is already a well-known act, and is already an established favorite. Miss Lewis, who is a mezzo-contralto of real merit, will be heard in popular, classic and jazz melodies.

The bill will be opened by America's premier symphonies, the Two Rhythms, whose repertoire for their vaudeville engagement includes classical and popular numbers.

In addition to the five vaudeville acts, the second chapter of "The Telephone Girl" series will be screened. From the choruses of laughter that are greeted "When Juliet Jones" at the Palace this week, it is evident that the new chapter film, which will be shown at the Empress Theatre, is a masterpiece of comedy.

George Archibald, worked with great success to accomplish accuracy in detail.

To add the interpretative work of Miss Dean and her company, there is a tempest that threatens death, and a number of other spectacular features, and the advice of a man whose face is furrowed by the storms of many years in command of sailing craft went far toward preventing inaccuracies in production.

Miss Dean has the part of Kate Masters, daughter of a retired sea captain resident of a small village on the ocean. While out fishing her boat is deliberately run down by a vessel commanded by "Brett" Morgan, characterized by Tom Santschi. Morgan's abuse of his men drives them to mutiny and he is placed in chains, guarded by Kate, while the crew strive to save the ship from destruction in a tempest. Her long-prayed for opportunity at hand, Kate realizes that the men have saved the vessel and crew live in the hands of the mutineers, who are incompetent but a reward. So she sacrifices of her own interest.

The ship is wrecked but Morgan's courage enables all on board to escape in lifeboats, and many they reach the haven of a rocky island. Here are enacted many dramatic scenes through the medium of which is completed the story of how a woman's sacrifice is rewarded.

Willard Louis Heads Cast In "Babbitt" At Capitol Monday

Only such a master of characterization as Sinclair Lewis could have built up a "Babbitt," typical of the business man of practical action whose heart is young with dreams of "romance." And "Babbitt" is all the realism and wit-fun that will ever be seen in a screen story.

Sinclair Lewis in his book, "Babbitt," has drawn to life the important man of affairs, whose activities in the city, social and business world, have made this country what it is. He is hard-headed, shrewd, money-grubbing and practical, yet there is the side that never appears—that is, the heart for spring-time with its fragrance of life.

Life to him seemed just a rumble of meaningless days—one as gray as the other. But it was his inner self that was the real Babbitt. Inertia, staid, and it gave to his career, it was his thoughtless side that Babbitt lived so he wanted to be surrounded by beauty and color.

His family is the average family, children growing up and developing individual traits and personalities, that conflict with the conservative character of their father. The irritating symbol of parental control drives Babbitt to despair. He is until in final revolt he breaks the barrier and goes in search of romance.

PERMANENT PLAYERS
OPEN SEASON MONDAY

Edmonton's Stock Company
And Mount In The New Empire
With Good Comedy Play

Monday night, September 8, marks the opening of the Empire Theatre in Edmonton's own new stock company in one of the most successful comedies of the past few years, entitled "Her Temporary Husband."

The play established a record at the Winnipeg Theatre last season, when presented there by the Winnipeg permanent players, and will undoubtedly repeat that success in Edmonton.

Sometimes, like shingles, love is to be all the rage, and it is certain that there is no time like a good laugh and in "Her Temporary Husband" there will be enough and more than enough to satisfy even the most chronic chrypsis.

It won't do to tell too much about the plot, as that would spoil the enjoyment of the play, but every character in the story, in brief, concerns a certain young lady who wishes to be a fortune teller, and does not do so without forfeiting her right to a fortune.

The story is a comedy, and does not do so without forfeiting her right to a fortune.

REAL STAR CAST IN DRAMA, REVELATION

Viola Dana, Marjorie Daw
And Monte Blue At Capitol Thursday

"Revelation," the new Metro picture announced by the Capitol Theatre to open on Thursday next has been heralded in other cities as one of the most important events of the season. It is a big, spectacular production, directed by George Fitzmaurice, and stars the well-known players of the Capitol Theatre, Viola Dana, Marjorie Daw, Monte Blue, Lew Cody, Frank Currier, Victor Connolly, George Siegmann, Kathleen Key, Otto Matson, Ethel Wales and Bruce Guerin.

The story is from Mabel W. Wall's book, "The House of a Thousand Doors," and is founded on an old French legend. The legend tells of a monk in a remote village who planned a room that was a punishment for his sins. He prayed for forgiveness and the Virgin appeared to him, the monk becoming forth with room as a sign of his forgiveness.

SIMPLICITY KEYNOTE OF LLOYD COMEDY FILM

Regent Theatre Offers
"Girl Shy" Starting On Monday

Simplicity of story is the keynote surrounding Harold Lloyd's newest feature, "Girl Shy," which will be seen at the Regent Theatre, Monday.

A small rural community is the background of the action, and the comedy occurs in the family of a young man who is a picture of simplicity.

SCREEN ACTOR LAUDS
WIDOWS AND SAYS WHY

Edward Horton, in "Rug-gus of Red Gap" At The Rialto, Meditates

"Widows attract men" they are exceptionally attractive to men—they always have been, and they always will be. Why?

Edward Horton, playing the leading role of Ruggus in "Ruggus of Red Gap," a James Cruze production for Paramount, showing at the Rialto for the last time today, laughed a moment before he continued:

"Well, I think it is because they don't take men too seriously. A girl is apt to take them as seriously as a man, and she often is a little shy.

Foreign Millionaire Sportsmen are in Absolute Control of Our Choicest Canadian Hunting and Fishing Grounds

THE VAST MARSHES OF LONG POINT, LAKE ERIE, FULL OF HIDDEN FOWLS AND CHANNELS, ARE THE GREATEST WILDFOWL HAUNTS NORTH OF THE GULF OF MEXICO—AND THEY ARE PRIVATELY OWNED.

THE MILLIONAIRE MEMBERS OF THE LONG POINT COMPANY DWELL IN THIS COTTAGE HAMLET IN THE MIDST OF THEIR MARSHES DURING THE HUNTING SEASON.

Long Point, in Lake Erie, Where Ducks and Geese Gather Annually By Millions, Was Sold Outright to Club of Wealthy Americans—Best Pools on Salmon Rivers of Quebec and New Brunswick Controlled by Outsiders—Canadians Forced to Poach—Practice Makes For Conservation

By GREGORY CLARK

HAVE the finest hunting and fishing grounds of Canada fallen into the hands of foreign sportsmen?

There is, in Lake Erie, a piece of Canadian territory nearly eighteen miles long, consisting of hundreds of thousands of acres, upon which, at certain seasons of the year, a Canadian deer and so on, but which is controlled and dwelt upon freely by its owners, a group of American citizens.

This piece of ground, known as Long Point, is the finest wildfowl preserve north of the Gulf of Mexico.

There is nothing else like it in northern America. It should be a great game preserve for wildfowl. But twenty-five years ago it was sold outright to a group of wealthy Americans, who have since then been hunting and fishing there.

During the summer, the lake behind Long Point, which is one of the most famous breeding grounds for black lake on the continent, is visited daily by dozens of motor launches with Canadian and American fishing parties. A hotel is run, located near the cottages, by the manager of the company, for the accommodation of tourists.

The Lid Goes on Tight

BUT when the first of September draws nigh the lid goes on Long Point. Wardens and guardsmen are stationed at various places along the heavily timbered shore. The warden is Canadian, mostly drawn from the village of Port Huron and adjacent places. And from that date on, for the duration of the duck and geese season, no man can set foot on Long Point.

Not can he hunt his bird or come into the reeds which run out, in many places, into small points from the main marsh, for whether they can rightly claim it or not, the company managers control every square inch of reedy water which are destined to be law.

There is duck hunting to be had in the lake behind Long Point. But not anywhere on the thousands of acres belonging to the company.

There the millions of the company, practicing entirely American in its membership, living in their cottages, are taken out by the guides and paddled amongst the lagoons and channels, to be in reach lands border the many points within the borders of the great marsh, to shoot at the flights of wild ducks as they come winging endlessly in from the north.

The membership of the club is believed by the residents of Port Huron to be not more than twenty-five or so. Besides, including the guests brought in by the members, there are rarely more than twenty people shooting on the point at any one time. One of the most prominent of the American members is Harry Dwyer Whitely.

To secure the legal limit of ducks per day is, on the private marshes of the company, no trick at all. Twenty-five ducks per day and two hundred in any one season is the limit per hunter, and by no means a difficult task to make in this paradise.

Conservation was not a popular and powerful movement until quite recent years. And if the Erie marshes had been left to the tender mercies of hunters ever since 1860, it is more than likely that there would now be little to which to offer sanctuary.

As it is, the members of these shooting clubs spend considerable money employing a staff of wardens all the year round to prevent any shooting on their property except by members. The members and their guests, few in number, about with the knowledge that they need not hog the sport—there is plenty. Unless the membership of these companies is exploited for commercial purposes, there is very little difference between these preserves and a sanctuary—the difference between a few thousand ducks and many thousand ducks.

One instance is related by a Port Huron man who is employed during the season to keep his fellow sportsmen off the preserve.

"This New York millionaire," said he, "has been coming up here for twenty years. He brings two, sometimes three or four, guests. They shoot a few hours a day, if the weather is right. They take away, except what they have eaten—all the ducks they shoot. I figure they take out about forty or fifty ducks apiece."

"That's their sport. They work hard at it, they are clean hunters, and they think the world of this marsh. They don't figure they are hogging any game. They are it that they are poaching the game. And their little shooting clubs are by way of reward for keeping a great sanctuary safe from the mob of boys and hunters who would certainly swarm in here if it were public."

"And I'm not the only resident of these parts that agrees with them."

"What if I came up here in October and wanted to hunt?"

"Well, the ducks are here, because of the marsh," said the warden. "Some say over, of course. Those are for you. If you pushed your boat into the reeds near the company's place, you would be cutting off in plain terms. No favors are granted anybody. You can get fair shooting—good shooting—all around the marsh. But the reason you can't is that the marsh is protected. The ducks haven't been exterminated."

Salmon Fishing Almost Gone

THE salmon fishing of the Atlantic rivers, except in Nova Scotia, is completely in the hands of wealthy Americans—and a few Canadians. Except at certain resorts and on certain unwashed stretches of water in the salt-water rivers, leaving scarcely a single fish on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, there is no place a Canadian can go and fish for that great and all sporting fish, the sea salmon, except as a poacher or as a guest of some member of the club which owns the river.

In the case of the Atlantic rivers, the government of New Brunswick and Quebec have issued, on a renewable basis, and for long periods of years, exclusive fishing rights. To use these great rivers, such as the Restigouche, Manapiskew, Miramichi, and the Saguenay, is to be a member of the club.

And any person is free to travel by canoe or boat up or down even the Restigouche as the member of the club. A peculiar fact is that, while paddling down the river, while in position, you are free to fish and to take salmon, but you must not stop, anchor or fish from the bank. You may stop and fish for trout—which abound in these rivers—but you must look no salmon.

A member of this newspaper's staff visited the Restigouche and observed the remarkable journey with which the choice salmon pools of this swift cold river are guarded.

"A salmon pool," he says, "is not what we Ontario folk usually think of as a pool at all, but a swift, racing place of water where the salmon take five in passing, and in which they will take the fly. In still, deep places stretches of water, such as are usually designated pools, salmon wait for it all."

"The salmon is said not to feed when going up a river to breed. They are therefore not hungry, and it is only in the swift water when they are forced to exert themselves that a passing fly will attract them."

"Throughout the length of the great Restigouche these pools abound. The river cannot be crossed by a bridge, and the only way to cross is by a bridge or by a ferry. The river is five miles long, and the only way to cross is by a bridge or by a ferry."

was no other means of getting a salmon. The outfit of our guides being known to the guardsmen, we were followed and watched throughout our journey. The stretch of the river known as the Devil's Half Acre, from the great pool of that name being it, was guarded by the guides. The most picturesque person in the world, like all the other guardsmen, he was a native of the great salmon river country.

"The moment we came on his water, he fell in behind us in an extraordinary long, elegant canoe, and he was the only one of the guides who he handled with consummate skill. As we drifted downstream Dwyer accompanied us, making it impossible to cast a fly into any of the many splendid pools which he guarded, and though we took our time, in the hope of the leaving us in such a way that we would be able to reach our destination which was one of the Red Bank club lodges. There we asked notice in the guides' quarters, which was courteously afforded us. Tom Dwyer barked in with us, and the next morning when we rose at dawn, he was with us and saw us safely off his boat."

"Thereby hangs a tale. Some years before, our own 'Cam' Adams, now in the great beyond, coming down with a party had produced a very official looking document, purporting to give him permission to fish the Devil's Half Acre. Tom, who cannot read, was impressed by the red seal and reluctantly consented to give the party a few salmon. When he learned a few days later that the document was a fake he swore a round oath that 'Cam' Adams would never get a chance to hook another salmon on his stretch of river. And 'Cam' never did."

Poachers Heavily Fined

"I think rivers are not grudgingly guarded. While all the best pools are owned by the Restigouche Salmon Club and by smaller clubs, a few of the fairly good pools of the river are owned by natives, and there are pools, lower down, owned by nobody in particular, where anyone can fish. But those pools where there is a likelihood of a salmon being hooked are possessed and guarded in perfect proportion to the likelihood of their being hooked upon poachers who defy the guardsmen."

"There is poaching going on all the time. The natives poach. Canadians cannot be several places at once, and it can be so arranged that a party can be broken up in such a way as to lose fishing in good pools while the guardsmen are elsewhere."

"The two-four millionaires club members are only on the river in any numbers during the height of the season, which is for a few weeks from mid-June on. After the height of the season the members come few and far between. This is the poacher's best chance."

shooting is under less conditions when country hunters never meet. But whether all members take their full count is very doubtful. Their sport is to be entirely similar to those of the marshes were thrown open to the public and hundreds of gunners were loose every day of the season.

And since the investment these wealthy men make in the preserves—the cost of maintaining a staff of wardens mounted up in a year—is worth safeguarding, conservation is practiced by the owners themselves, lest the fish or game be depleted.

Salmon used to abound in all the rivers running into Lake Ontario. Civilization drove them away—dams and pollution of the rivers by mills and factories. The salmon rivers of the east are guarded against more than poachers. There will be no pollution of the Restigouche; the Restigouche Salmon Club knows it.

In this sense the ownership of these exclusive paradises for the sportsman by a few of the wealthiest men of America means conservation. Very few men can afford to make time and expensive trips in search of fish or game.

Bulk of the fishing on these rivers and the great part of the hunting on the marshes would be by natives and people living in the vicinity. And the history of the forests and streams of America proves that conservation is, if not the last thing, certainly not the first thing in the minds of native populations.

Not for ten or fifteen years has any of the public domain been sold to private individuals for private shooting or fishing rights.

"Anything that is worth having as a private preserve," said Mr. Donald MacDonald, the deputy minister of game and fisheries for Ontario, "is worth having as a public sanctuary. A public sanctuary means, of course, public shooting grounds all around it. The policy of the government is now, and has been, for several years, conservation by means of provincially controlled sanctuaries, and when these can be afforded to the public, the government will be glad to have them."

"No more Long Points will be sold."

WOULD YOU RECOGNIZE THE PRINCE INCOGNITO?

Not Difficult for Prince of Wales to Pass as Ordinary Person—Few Recognize Him

VERY few people ever recognize the Prince of Wales when he is really incognito. An editor in Fawcett Square, as proof, told the following:

"I was out one day, I caught sight of the Prince of Wales in a crowd. He and they were strolling in some street distance, and I decided that I had to have a look at him. I was standing in the crowd, which certainly helped to disguise his identity, not a soul there except myself recognized him."

"This called to my mind an incident that occurred 'somewhere in France' during 1917. A car had broken down within uncomfortable range of the enemy's guns, and the driver was in danger. A signpost another car named by the driver, but stopped about 100 yards farther on. One of its occupants, an officer named H.M.E., alighted, walked back, the driver of the broken-down car, and volunteered the help of himself and his mechanic."

"It was accepted gratefully, and within a few minutes the car was in a runnable condition. The thankful driver got into his seat and begged to know who H.M.E. was. 'Oh, I'm the Prince of Wales,' said the officer. The driver stared with laughter and exclaimed: 'Hurray! That's a good one!' Whereupon the prince asked who he was. 'Oh, said the driver bravely, 'I'm 'specially invited'—and drove off."

"THAT young man says just a very late hour that he was the driver of the car. I'm the Prince of Wales," said the officer. The driver stared with laughter and exclaimed: 'Hurray! That's a good one!' Whereupon the prince asked who he was. 'Oh, said the driver bravely, 'I'm 'specially invited'—and drove off."

Suggestion to Build Waterway From Lake Erie to Ohio River Adds New Worry to Chicago Drainage Canal—Amount of Water Taken From Great Lakes by Such a Scheme Not Yet Estimated

ANOTHER American scheme for taking water from the great lakes system and diverting it from the St. Lawrence route to the Mississippi is being advocated in the state of Ohio. The idea is to build a canal between Lake Erie and the Ohio river at a cost running from 150 to 160 million dollars.

The advantages claimed for this canal is that it would enable Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland and other lake cities to get coal at water freight rates as stable as Cincinnati and places in the coal region to get iron ore also at low freight rates.

It is suggested that state and local governments should stand seventy per cent. of the cost and the United States government thirty per cent. War office engineers seem to regard the cost as prohibitive but the advocates of the scheme say that the estimates were based on peak load prices; so they are calling for fresh estimates.

The canal would be large enough to carry barges of 3,000 tons capacity. It would have a depth of 12 feet, a width of 75 feet at the bottom and a width of 110 feet at the top. The banks would be of concrete and the barges be motor propelled.

Many years ago there were four shallow canals from Lake Erie to the Ohio river, and the traffic was heavy. For nearly a century boats were drawn by horses and mules. That was before the railway came along and saved much time in shipment. But rail rates are so high today that the water route is again feasible.

Champions of the canal hope that a route will be selected and construction begin in the spring, which is an optimistic view. It would take five years to build the canal. Action can not be taken without the approval of congress. The Joint International Commission, dealing with Canadian and American boundary waters, should pass on it.

Four routes are being suggested. One from Pittsburgh through Youngstown to Ashtabula; one from Marietta through Sandusky to Cleveland; one from Port Huron through Sandusky to Sandusky and one from Cleveland through Hamilton and Dayton to Toledo with a branch from Defiance to Lake Michigan and the Northwest.

Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, and Milwaukee are cities which are fighting the Chicago drainage canal division with its plan for a navigation canal from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi. It may be in an attempt to weaken their opposition to the Chicago theft of water from the great lake system that Erie-Ohio canal is brought to the front at this time. There is no estimate of the amount of water the new scheme would take from the great lakes system.

HOGGE BURSTS BUBBLES OF FELLOW BRITISH M.P.'S

Openly Approves the All-Night Sitting Which They Publicly Denounce and Secretly Defend

MERRY CYNIC OF COMMONS DESCRIBES "CUSHY" LIFE

But Constituents Have to Be Impressed With Heroism and Self-Sacrifice of Their Representatives

By DIANA BOURBON
ONE of the most useful "privileges" of the British M.P. is his occasional all-night session. It is an almost priceless card to play, and the after-effects, if properly stage-managed, can be made to last for months. This is the way it is done: A disgruntled constituent visits his member at Westminster (constituents come in droves and expect to be entertained and shown around the parliament buildings) and perhaps throws out a hint that the life of an M.P. is an easy, or "cushy" one. The member listens patiently and at the proper moment leads with his trump card.

"You may say that being an M.P. is an easy job because 'the House' never sits until 2.45 in the afternoon," he will say. "There are committee meetings every morning that interfere with one's other work. And what job—one of your hard, exhaustive, whole-time jobs, mind you—lasts till 11 o'clock every night in the week, except Friday and Saturday and Sunday?"

He will not mention that "business for the day" is often finished by 8 or 9 o'clock, and the "Who Goes Home?" bell. Nor will he always remember to except Friday and Saturday and Sunday from the 31 o'clock-every-night rule. It rather spoils the effect. And, moreover, he is leading up to his climax.

"While at any time," he will conclude, "I may be called up to serve through the whole night in parliament, working, making speeches—what is far harder, listening to them—till four or five or six or later the next morning. But do not think that for that reason business will be deferred the following day. Oh, no! It is an imposition, this all-night session business. It is an outrage. It is unchristian. But I submit to it. And what thanks do I get? I am told that I have a cushy job!"

It goes down very well. The all-night sitting occurs perhaps two or three times in a session, but its effects are lasting. But just try to take it away from them!

When the Labor Whip Fainted

THIS last all-night session went on until six o'clock next morning, and at that hour one of the Labor whips who suffers from heart trouble, originally fainted in the lobby, and gave the affair quite double the usual publicity. The member who was possibly fainted in the lobby of the House of Commons, the all-night session, at 6 o'clock, that is.

Mr. J. M. Hogg, whose favorite parliamentary pastime, not unlike Don Quixote's, was for sitting in a windmill, is bursting out with his feelings.

He gave out an interview to the papers saying that all-night sittings were "stimulating."

that they were a good thing, that no one ever sat there through who didn't want to, and that everybody enjoyed them.

The M.P.'s were speechless, though not for long.

But Mr. Hogg is unshaken. In fact, he is very pleased with himself. He does not even take the faintest of the government whip seriously, saying that he is likely to do the same himself at any moment, but he enjoys an all-night session with the best of them, for all that. And here, perhaps, it would be as well to explain that all jobs in parliament, the whip is the most unpopular, though it must always be held by the most popular men of every party. The whip's duties are to see that there are a sufficient number of their party members present to vote for any bill they may be officially supporting, to prevent people who want to go home from going home, to persuade people to vote as they do not want to vote, for the sake of party unity, in short, to be, as the deputy speaker of the House once put it, "a sort of glorified janitor." Hard work indeed, throughout an all-night sitting, especially for a man with a weak heart.

As long as members will persist in delivering half-hour speeches on trivial amendments that concern perhaps three people out of the entire population of these islands, and are certain to be defeated without a division anywhere, or in making the speech they prepared exactly as they prepared it, although four or five people have already said exactly the same thing, or in wasting the time of the House in any of their other little ways, it is a good thing that they should occasionally be reminded by an all-night sitting, which may upset their dinner and theatre plan, and will certainly make them feel a little tired next day, that there is to be much work to be done, through sorrow, and that the longer they talk over the longer it will take!

I always note that the sitting has had a most salutary effect on the consciousness and relevance of the speeches next day and for several days to come.

"And to that remark comes a fervent 'Amen!' from members who may be sitting round writing articles, preferring to wait outside for the division bell rather than endure the heavy gun attack probably waiting within Sir Stephen's."

"The chief objection to an all-night session," Mr. Hogg proceeds, "would, I am quite sure, make no public complaint about it in the House if they had been kept up till the same hour during a night club, though conceivably they might be just as tired the next afternoon!" and he smiles with slight malice, for the most ardent opponents of the system are the younger members. But younger members have to do something or starve, and the all-night session is the first step of a politician's career are entirely valuable in judicious self-advertisement," one of the laziest mottoes on an automobile seen in Niagara Falls recently—Niagara Falls Review.

Black-Velvet Is Combined with Black-and-Gold Brocade and Trimmed with Red Fur.

By Mme. Frances

The Famous Creator of Fashions

AGAIN we have the season in which velvet and silver and gold and fur play the most prominent part. I say the most prominent part, for these gorgeous mediums may be seen in all the four seasons. Even during the Summer months silver and gold cloth and fur appear in evening gowns and evening wraps, but it is with the advent of Fall that they really come into their own.

The evening wraps this year seem to show a spirit of rivalry among themselves, each one trying to excel the other in beauty of effect.

The silver-and-gold material is gorgeous stuff, as soft as silk and quite expensive. But it is really worth the price, for it retains its beauty as long as a lovely piece of silk and there is no danger of tarnishing. A wrap for evening that is truly beautiful lasts for several seasons, so the best materials are not an extravagance. And to my way of thinking the best materials are never an extravagance, for they give double satisfaction in their beauty and their long duration.

The evening wraps shown here are admirable examples of the beauty and the variety that may be achieved through the medium of silver and gold and velvet. Fur, too, should be included in the list, for it trims at least three out of four wraps for evening.

The fourth wrap, this season, which omits fur as a trimming, does so because it is finished with a long scarf collar of the material, or a long plain scarf attached only at one point on the neckline and left free to be wound around the neck in any fashion that the wearer desires.

A stunning example of the long, slim coat, devoid of fur trimming, is seen in the model sketched down at the right. The material is supple silver tissue, and the lining is flame velvet, which material also makes the long, slim collar.

This Vogue of the straight evening wrap, cut on the identical lines of the slender daytime wrap, is quite new this season, and will doubtless be much exploited in wraps of beautiful material. The simplicity of the straight line and the beauty of the material in which it is interpreted combine to make a stunning garment, one which stands out with individual clearness among its more ornate companions to be seen at any evening gathering.

I have just designed a delightful model of this day-coat type for a smart client, who chose soft green velvet brocaded in silver for her material. She preferred a collar of fur because of its warmth and its soft becomingness next to the face, so I made the collar of soft, white ermine, a deep double one that may be pulled up snugly about the neck.

The wrap sketched at the left is of black velvet and gold and black brocade with red fox collar and cuffs. It is cut on straight, rather generous, lines, but left without a front fastening so it may be pulled in closer to the figure if the wearer desires. I find that the wrap without fastenings is more graceful, if the wearer knows how to draw it about her becomingly. The smart woman must learn this trick and be able to do it as well as the mannikins who catch a cloak up carelessly about them and achieve an effect that is grace itself.

The last-season vogue, by the way, for wrapping the coat very tight about the figure has given way to the looser line, as in the model at the left just mentioned, or to the perfectly straight line that is not wrapped at all.

Sketched on circular lines at the right is an amusing wrap that offers an interesting note of difference. It is of white velvet, cut in a circle and slit so that it may be slipped on over the head. White

In Silver, Gold and Gorgeous Velvet

The Evening Wrap May Also Take Fur or a Scarf Collar of Its Own Material

White Velvet Is Cut on Circular Lines and Trimmed with White Fox and Black Flowers.

The wrap to the left of this is silver cloth striped with black velvet. The scarf collar is of the material, while the deep cuffs are of monkey fur. The entire wrap is lined with scarlet crepe. The late Summer evening wraps narrowed down to two choices, the Spanish embroidered shawl and the velvet cape which was usually in some rose tint. This may mean that rose velvet will be popular for Fall wear, as the late Summer indications usually forecast Fall preferences.

The Spanish shawl will still be seen, when evenings are warm enough to warrant its appearance. An interesting Spanish shawl, embroidered in colors, was seen lately. It was a convertible affair, collared in ermine, that may be worn either as a wrap or an evening gown. The wrap is built on circular lines, with the fringe all about the edge. When the shawl is swathed about the figure to make a dress the fringe extends up one side, and the collar fastens close about the throat.

To progress to wraps for daytime, an important note here, too, is that the majority of smart wraps are tightened no more, but hang straight. Many of them are embroidered and made with deep hems of fur. Tailored capes are smart for sports and general country wear.

Kasha is a favored material, and this comes in colorful plaids as well as in plain colors, and sometimes the latter are embroidered in dark designs. Men's coating materials in checks and plaids are also smart for women's Fall coats.

The flare is also mentioned as having an important place in the silhouette. Coats that follow a straight tube line and then diverge into a flare are extremely smart in appearance, though they should be confined to the rather tall, slender person, as they cut the short figure off unpleasantly.

It is important to note that in the suit field, the ensemble creation, composed of three parts, has entirely taken the place of last season's tailored two-piece suit. As the majority of these make up their dress of a straight skirt and jacket, the coat must be long enough to cover the tunic. This means that the three-quarter and the full length coat will predominate where the ensemble suit is concerned.

Fur coats vary in length, but the short jacket, reaching to hip length or slightly below, will undoubtedly be worn by a lot of women who find this chic, youthful type consistently becoming. There are any number of novelty furs which will come in for popularity, and many of these, such as Tasmanian rat, are effective without being expensive.
